Henry was a true gentleman & cared dearly about his family, especially his mother. It was so touching how he went to see his mother every day for lunch. I was a colleague at Varian & worked with Henry for many years. Henry was always pleasant to everyone no matter how busy he was. He respected his staff and his co-workers. Henry also had a funny sense of humor. He asked to borrow one of my cats one time because he thought he might have a mouse in his house. He laughed when I told him that cats need to be taught to hunt by their mothers. He asked why I didn't teach my cats to hunt! The world now has one less gentleman. I hope his family finds comfort knowing what a kind man Henry was.
